CLOSE RUSS TIE SOUGHT BY NATO

PARIS (CP)-The Atlantic Alliance pledged today to "improve efforts to obtain better relations with the Soviet Union and Eastern European states in the political, economic, scientific and cultural fields."

This was stated in the final communique issued after a two-day meeting of the 15-country NATO council.

The alliance members "emphasized their willingness to explore ways of developing co-operation with the Soviet Union and the states of Eastern Europe.

They recognized, however, that there are "clearly different approaches" to this, either on a country-to-country basis or otherwise.

The communique said the alliance, born 17 years ago has produced the "basis for the present marked reduction of tension in Europe." The ministers said: "So, long as Germany continues to be divided there cannot be a genuine and stable settlement in

Has Succession Battle Started Among Socreds?

Times Legislative Reporter For anyone interested in B.C. politics, this week is a huge rough diamond needing considerable study before it can be determined how to dissect it to expose all possible facets.

But there's no doubt that some of this week's events will shine some light ahead the course will take in the near near future

Unless I've een dazzled into blindness by my own insights, the Mika illuminating events were the cabinet changes on Monday, the Vancouver civic election on Wed-nesday and the surprising disclosure that some cabinet ministers backed Mayor-elect Tom Campbell against the premier's choice, Mayor William Rathie. There was considerable dismay among the opposition, some neutral groups and even some Socreds that Wesley Black was picked for the health ministry because he does not have a reputation of being a good administrator or

But others, notably the doctors, were happy because they much prefer Mr. Black to retired Eric Martin (and that's why the premier, anxious to have doctors' cooperation, put the B.C. Medi-cal Plan under his administran as provincial secretary in the first place.)

I liked Mr. Martin and consider him one of the most human politicians I've met and that quality is rare in this breed. It's true, as his critics point out, that he blundered at umes, lost his temper played rough - so what else

But even his worst moments had the style of an ordinary mortal like you or me. They did not grow out of an overweening ego or holier-than-thou attitude. He had an abiding interest and love for politics because people was its stuff, and, with but few exceptions, he was merry.

He also was (and is) tremendously loyal to Premier Bennett and that is why he never became the health minister I believe he might have been. He believed in medicare, and fought for it, as ardently as any socialist and the little we have might never have come but for him. Yet few outside of a small circle knew his true feelings because his loyalty to his leader made him stand up and attract the abuse that should, at the man who decided how facilities while Mrs. Dailly, much he could spend on the lone woman MLA in hospitals and withheld from him the chance to start a full scale medicare program.

Mr. Black on the other hand will keep his head down to duck the barrage — some even nickname him "The Ostrich" — but he soon will have a convenient shield when the regulations for a federal medicare program begin pouring out of Ottawa.

With that to blame for everything that goes wrong in tuture, Mr. Bennett is safe on the health front no matter who holds the portfolio.

But he is not so safe with the three women ministers without portfolio. He stroked them with heavy praise— after appointing all three rather than face the conse-quences of choosing among them — then hopefully sug-gested that these nice little kittens run along home and play minister in their own

What a laugh! Women poli-ticians can turn into tigresses when the infighting starts. Mr. Bennett is going to get badly scratched while these three fight it out for supremacy — and even his own party will laugh at his deserved discomfiture.

(The first battle will be to get separate offices and secretaries. Compounding original blunder, the premier announced the three ministers

Then, to rub it in, they gave about 6,500 votes (more than 7 per cent of those cast) to a 21-year-old girl from Eastern Canada who spent only $250 on a campaign that identified her not only as a Marxist but a Trotskyite too! I can't believe that all those voters did it just for kicks.

This apparent urbanite sympathy for leftist under-dogs (observed in other parts of Canada this year) should raise some NDP-sized goosebumps on the Socred back-room brigade that will have to the next provincial election.

But, perhaps most signifi-cant of all, was Leslie Peterson's calm and deliberate disclosure that — heresy of heresies — not all the cabinet Dickensian costumes will be er space which has received the space committee of the United Nations sets an idealistic pace for the major countries to keep in guaranteeing that world security will not be threatened by man's activities out yonder.

The regulations laid down, indeed, would serve very well as a code of conduct for terrestrial existence. The public, knowing the experience of this planet with regard to international peace-keeping conventions, non-aggression treaties, mutual security pacts and "scraps of paper," will have more hope than conviction that the space promises

That is not to say that the draft agreement should not be welcomed as a forward step in our mastery of the new medium of travel and exploration. The possibility of faulty observance is no reason for refusal to seek ways of preserving the peace and trying to set up standards of international conduct which will serve at least as guidelines if not firm commitments

The new agreement, which Canada helped in framing, undertakes a basic understanding that "the exploration and use of outer space, including the moon and other celestial bodies, shall be for the benefit of all mankind."

With that as a foundation, the document sets forth other binding concepts: freedom of exploration and use of outer space; all activities to be subject to international law and the UN Charter; no claims of sovereignty or national appropriation; peaceful purposes only; no nuclear weapons to be placed in space or on a celestial body; military bases and fortifications on the moon and other bodies are forbidden; no weapons testing or military manoeuvres are allowed; open ac-

THE DRAFT TREATY ON OUT- cess to all stations and equipment on celestial bodies is guaranteed; approval of the 28-nation outer other regulations cover aid to astronauts and the return of launched property landing in the wrong areas on-earth.

> Obviously these are worthy concepts. They are, in fact, essential if man's exploration and use of outer space is not to become a murderous military race for domination of the heavens, with our planet a host-

But, like any peace-keeping agreement, the value of the instrument will lie in its observance by the nations of the world, and it is clear that policing the law will be much more difficult than checking on similar international agreements

Interpretation, too, will provide many sharp controversies. The clause stating that "the moon and other celestial bodies shall be used exclusively for peaceful purposes" could open up long arguments. Even in the relatively primitive stage of our present intrusions into outer space, there is room for disagreement regarding the nature and purposes of much of the hardware and personnel being hoisted aloft by the United States and Russia

For a long time to come, the space treaty can have practical importance only for these two giants, the United States and Russia. The effectiveness of the treaty, then, would depend on the degree of cooperation and confidence existing between these powers—just as these considerations govern the earthbound covenants that provide for our peaceful existence.

But it is right and necessary that there should be a start on the establishment of international law in outer space, ambitious-perhaps even impudent-though that may seem at this point.

MR. HAROLD M. WRIGHT scarcely qualifies as an unbiased observer of events surrounding private alienation of public parkland, nor as an uninfluenced bystander on the issue of dumping waste materials in the lake which is the lewel of Vancouver Island's biggest park. Mr. Wright is president of Western Mines, whose operations in Strathcona have received the blessings of the Social Credit government.

Those blessings take significant form inasmuch as they cover the grant of mining claims and establishment of a townsite in the park, arrangements for disposing of mine waste on parkland or in the lake's depths, and include the approval of the provincial pollution control contested before the court and cannot, of course, be discussed publicly. Mr. Wright says in his annual report that production of the mine has been delayed by "opposition emotional and mainly unfair to a _Strathcona.

new producer in the mining industry proceeding to production." He also says that "a virtual torrent of abuse by some citizens' groups and some news media" followed granting of permits covering mine and community waste disposal.

The company president's position is understandable. It is his business to make money for himself and others connected with the mine from minerals located within the park. He naturally chafes at delay.

Because of his special interest, Mr. Wright seems to be blind to the loss of public confidence in the department of a government charged with the protection of parks for future generations. He can argue, of course, that a profitable board. The approval is now being enterprise for his company taken at the expense of public parkland will produce funds for the government. In that he is correct.

Retaliation on the Banking Front?

A CCORDING to a recent, and undoubtedly accurate report, the debate on the government's proposed Mercantile Bank is being attentively followed by American observers here. This certainly should occasion no surprise because there was evidence of official A m e rican concern well before the exchange of notes on the subject by the two countries.

As far back as August 25, Senator Jacob Javits of New York introduced legislation to provide federal regulation of foreign banking corporations doing business in the United States and its territories. Mr. Javits, a liberal Republican, has long experience and great influence in Washington: indeed, he is a serious contender for the Republican vice-presidential nomination. The fact that he is of a different party from Mr. Johnson is not particularly significant, so far as the banking bill is concerned, because party discipline means little in Congress and coalitions of liberal Republicans and Democrats are normal ### rather than exceptional. Hoping for Best

The Canadian government is, of course, well aware of the Javits bill and of its possible implications. Its attitude, apparently, is to hope for the best. There is little evidence at the moment that parliament has taken note of Senator Javits' initiative, although it has shown concern about representations made to Ottawa by the Johnson administration.

The foreign banking control bill, as described by Senator Javits, is a somewhat curious document: in one sense liberal, in another restrictive. At Monday in the 15first glance it appears intended, not to close, but to open doors for foreign Council, is considered business. Thus, in his own description of it, the senator says: "Under existing law any foreign banking corporation desirous of doing business in the United States must obtain permission from the individual state in which it seeks to open its branch, agency or controlled subsidiary. Accordingly, I am informed that the state department has had to explain to many unbelieving foreign banking concerns proposing to do business in the United States that the federal government has no control over the right of entry or of supervision over such activities." Or again: "If our policy is to deny banking facilities to foreign banks then, on the same theory, U.S. banks can be deprived of the right to open new branches or to continue operating in foreign countries." What Senator Javits is after is reciprocity. This may well be good news to countries which do not discriminate against American banks. But regulation must be used either way; what would be the effect of the legislation, if enacted, on a country (such as Canada) which has engaged in retroactive discrimina-

Should Congress pass the bill, a foreign corporation would henceforth require approval of the U.S. comptroller of the currency, in order to establish a branch, agency or offices within any state. Before granting a charter the comptroller would have to consider various factors including "the written comments of the department of state" which has already demonstrated its keen interest in the future of the Mercantile Bank. The comptroller would have wide powers in respect to examination, prescribing rules and regulations and requiring reports. A significant section upon the foreign banking corporation or its branch, agency or controlled subsidiary operating within the United States, the District of Columbia, the territories and possessions of the United States, or the commonwealth of Puerto Rico.'

No particularly hopeful conclusions may be drawn from the fact that some months of inactivity have elapsed since the Javits bill was introduced. The senator announced at that time that he expected much debate over details of his proposal and was interested in stimulating interest in the general proposition, which is new to the United States. Thus it is improbable that he intended to proceed with it in 1966. Since then American interest in the proposition, both in the administration and Congress, has probably been sharpened by the debate in Canada over restriction of the Mercantile Bank.

The question is: What is likely to happen in Washington in 1967? It is understandable that there should be much concern about this in Canadian banking circles because of the important interests of Canadian banks, especially in New York. What is surprising is the apparent lack of concern in the Canadian government since the United States is seldom negligent in the protection of its

Quebec Aims

Montreal Le Devoir

Premier Johnson's government has just sprung an agreeable surprise on those who suspected it was marking time. Until the last few days it had been expected that the speech from the throne would be rather thin and that the session would deal mainly with administrative

The speech ... announced, on the contrary, that the government is determined to carry out its election program without delay. It is clear that not all paragraphs of a speech from the throne should be taken at face value. A guess is that certain projects are at the idea stage rather than precise and definite undertakings. But the general impression that emerges from the document is very

On constitutional affairs it is a matter, for rejoicing that the government plans to take constructive steps with a view to realigning the political structure of Quebec and of Canada. . .

Events during the last 12 months have shown that initiative in this field should not be expected from Ottawa. It is from Quebec that the strongest demand for a change has come. It is normal that Quebec should originate measures aimed at reaching the objective.

It is also normal that the legislative become ... the cornerstone of research which should be very broad and cover

A proposed law permitting the holding of referendums is aimed especially, if we really understood the speech, at constitutional questions. Let us hope that this law, which would turn over to the people the last word on constitutional matters, will very soon permit Quebec to free itself of a respected but outmoded organism - the legislative council.

Social Domain

In the social and economic domain, surprise was expressed about the speech's silence on certain things ... such as the General Investment Corp. and Sidbec (Quebec's proposed steel industry) as well as with some overgenerous statements, especially about tourism and immigration.

On the other hand, it must be admitted that in the fields of agriculture, labor relations, aid to industry, housing and regional development, exploitation of the forests, economic planning, the speech contains many interesting and promising passages.

But it is too soon to judge projects for which we have nothing more than vague

In the field of governmental projects, there was one omission that was very serious and very disappointing: No electoral map. Yet this would be one of the main tests of the sincerity of Johnson's desire to make the government of Quebec more democratic. . . .

The in-fighting on these issues, thus far largely in private except for one violent Zambian speech, has been as fierce as any that experienced UN observers have Africans hope to force British acceptance of the changes. Britain and its allies are trying to get the amendments softened without a floor fight.

The United States and Japan clearly hope, by a display of solidarity with Britain, to persuade Africans the British position is invulnerable, or at least that it is not worth the cost of an all-out public assault

This strategy seems scarcely likely to succeed. The Africans have yet to bring up their big artillery: the Soviet Union.

of Dec. 16, 1906:

Soviet delegates have sat back, awaiting the right psychological moment to cry "Perfidious Albion." Behind this immediate tactical pulling and hauling are several major issues 1. British-American standing in Africa. Much of black Africa has made clear it regards Rhodesia as a test of the sincerity of professed British and American regard for human rights. United States delegate Arthur J. Goldberg sought to make clear Monday the American concern is genuine. He said sanctions, while not "punitive or vengeful," were "necessary in order to drive home to the illegal regime that the international community will not tolerate the existence of a discriminatory system based or minority rule. . ."

The United States, Goldberg said, saw what happened a century ago, at the time of the American civil war, when men tried to nize a political principle of racial superiority."

Ready for Sacrifice Washington "will apply the full force of our law" to implement the British sanctions plan, if adopted, he said, even though it will mean "loss of a source for certain materials critical to our industrial economy." 2. The pace of future UN pressure on white-minority rule in the rest of southern Africa. Here Britain and the United States appear to differ, at least in emphasis, Britain is stone-walling on pressure against any country except Rhodesia. Goldberg stressed that defiance of a mandatory sanctions order would be a serious breach of charter obligations. He appeared to imply willingness to punish the breach. 3. Zambia's future: Zambia, formerly Northern Rhodesia, is generally agreed to be the country whose economy will be most critically injured by tightened sanctions on Rhodesia. Her copper mines depend heavily on Rhodesian coal; her exports largely pass over Rhodesian railroads.

It is because this injury could be prolonged by a half-hearted economic crackdown that Zambia has been so sharply critical of the British blueprint, demanding quick, decisive action.

Zambia's delicately balanced non racial society could easily collapse, it is feared, under severe economic pressure, with the relatively moderate and prowestern President Kenneth Kaunda being ousted by African extremists.

Both Goldberg and Japanese delegate Akira Matsui expressed sympathy for Zambia's plight.

The Improbable Revolutionaries Who Are Going to Pacify Vietnam

By ERIC WENTWORTH The Washington Post

VUNG TAU - Seldom has history seen more improbable revolutionaries than the thousands of young men in black pajamas being trained in the sandhills near this seaside resort east of Saigon.

These "Revolutionary De-velopment Cadres" are the bright hope of the movement in the struggle for the loyalties of Vietnam's more than 12 million peasants. As such, they enjoy advice and support from the Vietnam arm of the Central Intelligence Agency and other United States and free world representatives in this country. The "RD Cadres" are also viewed, by their Vietnamese mentors here, at least, as missionaries sowing the seeds of a new morality across the war-weary countryside.

Organized in 59-man teams wearing their traditional peasant garb, the RD cadres nter hamlets where nearby friendly troops provide sect rity against large-scale Viet Cong attacks. They root out lingering VC or VC sympathizers, organize hamlet self-defence militia against VC guerrilla attacks, try to answer the hamlet dwellers' gripes and desires and stimulate efforts to improve the hamlet's political, social and Training of eadres here at Vung Tau is in mass production. When the present class graduates in mid-January, about 15,000 will have passed through the 12-week course. Another 15,000 are deployed throughout the country without benefit of this course but be sent here later. Estimates of the eventual total force range as high as

Big Challenge

To combat Communism and official corruption and rebuild a rural society shattered by two decades of conflict are tasks to challenge the most qualified revolutionaries. To call the ones being trained improbable" is to note certain facts about their origins, motives and abilities.

In the first place, they are recruited by province chiefs, who fill quotas for each class ce the cadre will return to whose loyalties they can rely, certainly not ones who might he over-zealous in relaying complaints provincial officialdom to

"The best way to improve official observes, perhaps only half-facetiously, "is to hang some of the province chiefs. econd, though the cadres will be working in small hamlets, an estimated 70 per cent of the recruits have come from the larger towns where presumably they are easier to find but where also there is a traditional bias against peasants. Though American advisers hope that future classes will have a higher ratio of hamlet dwellers, it is conceded that young men are scarce in rural are these days. In fact, more girls (the present class has 480) may have to be included.

Avoiding Army

As for motivation, it is believed that about half the recruits sign up to avoid military service — an understandable reason, considering the nature of many Vietnamese army units, hardly a constructive one, For example, Phan Van Xang, a 19-year-old trainee from Phong Dinh province in the delta, told a visitor here that he had four brothers in the army and that was quite enough.

When it comes to abilities the average recruit, while 20 years old, has only about a fifth grade education. On this those who direct the centre insist that the cadres' mission doesn't require conventional skills 'We are not training soldiers or politicians or technicians," says the bright young commandant, Maj. Nguyen Be. "We are training revolutionaries — men and women who are motivated and dedicated to work with These do not need to be highly qualified. They need only set Improbabilities aside can the revolution come off? The lack of good manpower is acute and 12 weeks is a very short time in which to turn dubious raw material into dedicated missionaries. How long any dedication can be sustained once the cadre leaves Vung Tau is also questionable.

Once can expect the cadres be effective when the namlets where they are working are well-protected, and would require immense investments of troops. On the other hand, the program seems to combine the best and avoid the worst of Saigon's previous efforts to win over the countryside: agroville cadres, rural political cadres, people's action teams and all the rest.

Many Successes

Already, in places like Binh Dinh province, where Maj. Be and his American advisers first launched the RD cadres last year and where American. Korean and Vietnamese troops provide strong security, cadre teams can boast numerous success: elected hamlet chiefs who feel safe enough to sleep in their hamlets; the occasional repulse of VC guerrillas; new bridges and schools and other sions of the "new life."

The final answer, though, will rest with the peasants themselves. Do they really want a revolution or are they just too weary and want to be left alone?

When a good RD team is working in a hamlet, the people usually seem to respond enthusiastically. But the team moves on? Take Bacanh hamlet, where the program early this year went so well that the governpublished a pamphlet about it afterward.

Among other things, it said, the inhabitants of Bacanh with help from the cadre 'devised a series of plans to deal with any contingency which might arise to threaten the hamlet." Asked by a visitor about plans, the 30-year-old hamlet chief, Phan Van Dang, said

"At 'least for now," the editorial insisted, the population problem did not seem to create serious difficulties; should be sought in scientific and technical progress, not in what Osservatore "expedients that offend the moral order willed by

The fact is that

Gandhi in India has to confront what is, not what might be. Only heavy shipments from North America's surplus are making up the diffenence, and that once-troublesome surplus is now shrinking fast.

Mostly True

The gloomy picture presented by many scientists is, as far as I can determine essentially true. Food produc tion is now staying ahead of population growth, but in a few years' time the rate of population growth will exceed the rate of food increase, if things continue as they are

John Turner-A Young MP Who Is Coming on Strong

By DOUGLAS FISHER and HARRY S. CROWE (Mr. Crowe is associate professor of history at Atkinson College, York University. Mr. Fisher, a form er NDP MP lectures in Canadian government at Carleton University.)

"I think that today with a properly conceived campaign, an absolute unknown could be propelled from obscurity to national leadership within six months."

Hon. John Turner, MP

There now! A text for a single sermon on the go-go, young modern, global village guys in politics. For example, the minister without portfolio, the member from St. Lawrence-St. George, Meg's dancing partner, the tycoon's step-son — John Turner.

It's almost a year since Lester Pearson brought five, fresh younger faces into his cabinet: Joe Greene, Larry Pennell, Jean-Luc Pepin, Jean Marchand, and John Turner. have all done well. Pennell, the solicitor-general, is both the most personable and the least ambitious of the quintet. Pepin, minister of energy and resources, has taken the slow path to resources, has taken the slow path to prominence, working up a mastery of the subject fields embraced by his department. The other three have all been mentioned in he futures for Liberal Party leadership, Mar chand most seriously al-though he is much less likely to have such a goal in his mind than Messrs. Greene and Turner.

It is hard to believe that Mr. Greene, is a product of Toronto and the University of Toronto Schools. The Ottawa Valley overlay of denim blarney and the most extravagant kind of partisanship, mel-lowed with drollery and deflated of pomp — all this makes a mighty engaging politician. But it's throwback stuff, great for the unwashed and that older generation whom, we are assured, isn't going to count for much, much

This brings us to the least-to-be envied of the five men last December. A minister without portfolio has never counted for much and no one then nor anyone now has had an image of Mr. Turner as a young hand-picked eminence behind the centre of power, the Prime Minister.

But in his first year the youngest minister has come on, even though he's had little responsibility and few tasks.

Why the beginning of a boomlet for Turner? How has he done it? It's easy to say it's good looks, a dynamic appearance, a touch of the Kennedy about him. Let's examine him more

Mr. Turner reminds us a lot of a Studs Lonigan who made it. Sometimes in watching him you can imagine him as a character, even the hero (at an early stage) of Edwin O'Connor's The Last Hurrah. He seems to have a tough cunning and a sensitive caution about doing too much or trying to be too many thing to too many people. So he sticks with the wholesome line, the short sentences, the attractive pleasant bounce. Not a touch of the cracker-barrel philosopher or the brooding, estive radical or the many-faceted personal

One piece of information about John Turner that initially surprised us was that as an undergraduate at UBC he was the raciest, sideof-the-mouth, slang-and-cliche-spouting sports buff on the campus. The kind of kid that's labelled Flash or Speed or Biff. Hardly the darling of the Junior League or the toast Montreal society. Conclusion? He's not a simple person.

John Turner reacts furiously to the picture of himself as a "silver spoon" lad. He got out from under, went on his own, and has made his way on his own, and that's that. This is easily believable. But his edginess about the image exhibits two qualities. One is something he's conscious about: a toughness, a masculin ity, which suggests he really is the beer parlor, not the salon type. The other he is probably unaware of; that's supreme confidence. It probably settled over the able widow's son slowly as the lady took her children into the circles of power and education and money. Mr. Turner has the natural patina of the Establishment circle.

When he entered Parliament in 1962 everyone had a gander at John Turner. He didn't try for sensations. In a caucus full of thrusting young men who considered themselves radicals, he sheered away from any expression of anything ideological. He did this consistently and until a few months ago most of his young colleagues dismissed him contemptuously as a "right-winger."

* * * Now these same chaps are confused or bemused because who is outpolicying the Allan

"right-winger." Now he is the advocate of the labor reforms argued in the Freedman Report and the guaranteed annual wage and free universal education and electoral reform and

Turner has been making his move through speeches outside the House, and with good work within the party but beyond the caucus, for example on the floor of the Liberal Conference. He's hired a bright idea man and the two of them have been reading all the latest American idea books, especially on the new generation and the new technology and the new vocabulary.

Sometimes the speeches are bloody awful, mismashes of peppy paragraphs shot with science fiction jargonism and the balanced es of the Kennedy rhetoric. But they are all positive; there's little looking back wards and almost a total lack of either partisanship or the Canadian vice, ambiguity. Thus Mr. Turner is beginning to register and a new myth is taking shape and may become

At those moments when this process seems all too slick or when we remember that Mr. Turner has not proved to be overwhelming in the Commons, it strikes us as a bit of a swindle. But he is handsome, hard, energetic, clever, a "quick learn," a good mixer, and most of all ... young! He might go far soon.

"construction element includes a 10-man "civic affairs" team with census-grievance, and administration and motivation units of three men each. It is the task of the census-grievance men to take a formal hamlet headcount and to glean informally the inhabitants' complaints and "aspirations."

'New Life'

Also in the "construction element" are the six members of the "new life development" team charged with matters involving education and culture, sanitation and hygiene, land reform, agicul-ture and cottage industries, farmer co-operatives and public works.

These men are far from expert in the various subjects. Their job is to encourage the their own lot and then help advice and materials they need from the or American officials in the province.

"More than anything else," says one key American at Vung Tau, "the cadre is a catalyst." A great deal depends, however, on just how the teams are used back in "Some of our cadres are used now as bodyguards for the province chief," a highranking Vietnamese at the centre complains. In other cases, province chiefs have assigned teams to defend outposts or undertake other military duties. Largely because of such misuse, and of sending teams into hamlets where they couldn't be properly protected, more than 1,400 cadremen have been killed or wounded this

Maj. Gen Nguyen Duc Thang, the highly regarded minister of revolutionary development, whose bailiwick includes the cadre program, cited these and other shortcomings this fall. Far too often he said, local officials trying to fill a quota were moving teams too rapidly from hamlet to hamlet and producing half-baked results.

Bureaucracy

It is uncertain at this point whether the cadres will turn into a vast new bureaucracy. Optimists suggest that some members will find other government jobs and the rest will gradually be absorbed into the local community.

Skeptics may wonder just how effective the improbable revolutionaries will be in revolutionaries will clearing up the advanced corruption in Vietnam. Since the province chief assgns men to the specific slots on each team, he can make certain that only friendly ones go to the census-grievance work.

As for corruption in the higher echelons, the revolutionaries and those who lead them work for the government, too. They could risk their own jobs and conceivably their whole program by

Bubbling Start for Vancouver's Fountain

Someone christened the foun-tain with an unscheduled box of detergent and minutes after the water started spurting, the fountain filled with soapsuds.

As officials and spectators stood in the pouring rain, the suds coated the floor of the pool and spilled over onto the pave-ment beside the fountain.

Engineers said the detergent would probably work itself out in a few days, but if it didn't they would be forced to drain rect until Thursday by the pro-fence around the site with paining bee and became the centre vincial works department. Is of Vancouver's deepest civic two granite pillars with figures. The idea caught on, and fence mystery started splashing and carved on them. Colored lights wound up bubbling Thursday. The fountain was opened of construction of the fountain the works department ficially by Premier W. A. C. Bennett in a short, soggy cere-

Winters said he talked with Connor about several general items but specifically about the new guideline program because "I wanted to make sure about the impact on Canada."

The minister's party, which included Commissioner-General Pierre Dupuy, returned to Ottawa by air.

Winters recalled Canadian apprehensions earlier this year that the guidelines would make American subsidiaries work against the Canadian economy.

In general, bank lending is restricted while U.S. corporations are asked, as part of a voluntary but well-policied program, to curb direct invest-ment, repatriate more earnings and boost exports.

As the world wags, I suppose we carried more important news yester-day than the Hollywooddatelined announcement of Walt Disney's death. But to me, as to very many fathers, mothers, boys and girls in this city, the headline brought a feeling of personal loss.

This, I suppose, is because we tended to think of Walt Disney in personal terms. He was father to Mickey Mouse and Donald Duck, and a sort of kind, yarnning imperishable granddad to the rest of us.

You might perhaps find some child in the land, or greying adult, who was never exposed to Walt's magic. Most of us, though, have gone times

I will not call Walt an institution. That's a harsh, cold word for the man with the debonair mustache and

Walt Disney was, and himself became, one of the world's happier traditions. The Iron Curtain was no barrier to him. I have been told that his enchantments penetrated even into Red China. traumatic.
"I can work with a genius," he summarized, "or even a perfectionist. But deliver me from both in the same package!"

The charmed viewer, how-ever, had cause to bless Walt his insistence on the perfect scene, the flawless production.

Whether their background was the Arctic, the desert or the woods, the nature sequences he brought to the screen have never been bettered.

The conservationist, the educator, are deep in his debt for these. To the city dweller who might never see wilderness, Walt brought the bear and the beaver, the wolverine, the horned beasts of forest mountain. (Remember grand crash of bighorn rams hurtling together while the ewes browse calmly near-by? Remember the beauty and menace of Walt's desert, and that strangest of combats between hawk and rattle-snake? Cameramen waited weeks and months for such episodes as those.)

But this was a gentle realist. I don't recall that in lethal encounters, Walt required that children should look on death. A bush interposed, or the camera shifted. He was, first and always, a magician who performed for children. Grown-ups could come along if they wished; but though parents waited lineups to see the best of the Disney shows, they were guests, not tenants, in his

Although Mickey Mouse was his own creation, inspired by the actual mouse that flipped in and out his cartoonist's wastebasket, Walt did more adapting than originating. As an adaptor, he was magnificent. He loved to embellish and enrich.

SHOPPING GUIDE

Every Christmas, we casually ask our friends to "drop in" some time during the holiday season. It never fails—they all manage to "drop in" at the same time! Usually I'm frantically trying to find enough chairs, cups, glasses—and especially food to offer 'em . . . but not this year. I'm prepared, for a change. This week I stocked up on all sorts of treats to feed guests you might keep these in mind for coming parties, too.

An ordinary tray of canapes takes on a really festive air when you dress up the treat with one of the cheeses I've found. They are imported from just about everywhere—Denmark, The Netherlands, France—and they all have a distinctive flavor all

Aged to just the right taste, these cheeses are flavored with sesame seeds, spices—some are even given a lift with a special kind of Christmas spirit. Prices range from 69 cents to $1.09 a

As canape bases, try the new type of crispy cracker which is flavored with onion and a touch of sesame. Top with cream cheese and for a special holiday touch, cut slices of green pepper in holly leaf shapes and add a bit of pimento for a seasonal motif. Price of these crackers is 39 cents a package.

All sorts of meats are available, imported from Europe. Sausages, garlic-lavored or given added taste with peppers; can be found ranging in price from 45 cents a pound to 99 cents.

For just chewing, set these around in bowls for your guests, These snacks are bacon-flavored, puffed and crunchy. You should Skim Milk Powder delicious little puffs make dandy toppings for casseroles, too. taste what a chip-dip does to them-m-m-m! Crushed, these

BRIDGE LESSON By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY

Newspaper Enterprise Association A letter from Toronto reads, in part: "In a recent duplicate almost every North-South pair wound up at four spades. The bidding usually went as I have shown and several West players opened the three of diamonds. After this start the rest of the defence was was easy. West would rise ♦ J853 ♥ K6 ♦ K1084 ♣ K75 with the ace on the first trump lead and give East a diamond ruff. East would lead back a heart and a second diamond ruff would defeat the EAST WEST A A 2 ♥ A 10 9 8 7 4 ♦ J 7 5 3 ↑764 ♥QJ52 ♦9 ↑Q9864 contract. I was the only man to double and I am pretty proud of that double in spite of the SOUTH (D) ★KQ109 fact that North, South and my partner all uni-ted in criticizing me. What do you think?" AQ62 AJ103 East-West vulnerable We have seen enough West North East South of such Toronto player as Eric Murray and

1♥ 2♦ 2♥ 2♠ Pass 4♠ Pass Pass Dble Pass Pass Pass Sammy Kehela to know that some of the best bridge in the world is Opening lead-+ 3 played there but we did your home now. Let professionals do it and avoid the diamond lead against the four spades contract.

It is very good reasoning indeed. East's raise is obviously based on distribution, not on high cards. Thus he washing. Free estimates. ously based on distribution, not on high cards. Thus he is likely to have a singleton in the diamond suit which both opponents have bid. He is also marked with three trumps so that the diamond opening will produce two ruffs.

As for this West's double we have to consider it as sheer brilliance. He decided to get a top, not just a good sneer brilliance. He decided to get a top, not just a good score, and he got his top.

On the other hand we must point out something that everyone at the table overlooked. If either North or Southhad run out to five diamonds (no reason why they should) there would have been no way to defeat that contract assuming that declarer located both the jack of diamonds

CHANNEL CHIT CHAT: A 90-minute variety special starring Juliette and a cast of other Canadians, a visit to royal palaces of Britain and an adventure film for youngsters, are among the highlights of Christmas Day programming on CBC-TV.

The musical special with Frank Sinatra and his daughter Nancy will be repeated by CBS-TV May 3 Ozzle and Harriet Nelson, whose long-running series on ABC-TV ended this year, will be guests on CBS-TV's Red Skelton show Jan. 24 . . . Football's great one-time fullback, Jim Brown, gets an acting assignment on NBC - TV's I Spy. A Tijuana Brass special is reported set for CBS-TV, with the planned air date Feb. 24 . . . The Jan. 11 with the planned air date Feb. 24 . . The Jan. 11 premiere of ABC-TV's Wednesday Night Movies will be 'Ulysees," starring Kirk Douglas, Silvana Managano and Anthony Quinn . . . ABC-TV's children's series. Discovery, offers a two-part tour of London Dec. 25 and

Jan. 1 with the puppets Kukla, Fran and Ollie.

ABC's broadcast of the Tournament of Roses Parade Jan. 2 will be hosted by Los Angeles Dodgers announcer Vin Scully and by Elizabeth Montgomery, star of the Bewitched series. It sounds like a better pairing than Bob Quintrell and Dinah Christie the way, Miss Christie was paid $500 for the Grey Cup Parade debacle, plus expense

The King's Outlaw, a swasbuckling adventure series The King's Outlaw, a swasoucking adventure series starring Jean-Claude Drouot as the French outlaw Thierry la Fronde, returns to CBC-TV with a new series starting Monday, Jan. 9 . . . Don't look now, but the man directing the pickup band for Ice Capades, Charles Sanford, has just finished video-taping the CBS-TV Sid Caesar reunion with Imogene Coca, Howard Morris and Carl Reiner due for '67 release.

West Germany's new chancellor, Kurt Kiesinger, is interviewed on CBS-TV's Face the Nation Sunday, in Bonn . . An NBC-TV documentary about control of the possession and use of firearms in America is scheduled ... ABC-TV offers another hour special with the Beatles Jan. 10.

Instantaneous, interconnected programming by the many stations of the U.S. National Educational Television network will arrive in a big way by late next year. Ford Foundation money is right behind the scheme which will also connect about 75 of its stations for a two-hour program on President Johnson's State of

Foolish to Predict A Patient's Death

One of the most foolish things that some of us physicians do is to volunteer the statement that a patient will be dead tain length of time. In manyof these cases, the patient die; and sometimes he even goes shead and recovers completely. I remember early one day seeing in consultation a spry old banker of 81 who had wakened that morning unable to talk or to move his right arm and leg. Because for a while he was unconscious, his chances of living out the week were slim, but fortunately, I did not hazard any guess as to his length of life, because by noon, he was sitting up and demanding lunch, and by evening he was feeling so well that he took guests to dinner and then to the theatre! Another time I saw a friend of 55, who one evening was stricken by a typical big stroke. He was rushed to the hospital unconscious, and with a paralysis of his right side. Next morning, to everyone's surprise, he' sat up and demanded breakfast, and that afternoon he went home well.

I suspect that in these cases the brain is almost paralyzed by the sudden shock produced by a ruptured tiny artery, and then it recovers. Also it is possible that small arteries around a plugged-up one can open up and then carry enough blood around the injured spot to restore function to the injured part of the * * * Against a cancer was the fact that almost as soon as the man woke from the operation he demanded food and plenty of it. He ate ravenously and started gain-ing weight. A year later, when In happened to rum into his doctor, I asked, "When did the rancher die?" And his doctor said, "Die, nothing. He's back to 220 pounds; he is working hard every day, and the tumor that was in his stomach has disappeared." What happened probably was that the man's strong body, when given a chance, overcame the cancer, and kept it from growing. This happens in a certain number of cases of cancer, and this is the sort of thing that makes a reputation for many a cancer quack.

Calendar Records Bit of City History

By ELIZABETH FORBES To mark Canada's Centennial Year and also its own sary, the firm of e m berton calendar . that will no doubt be cherished as an historic brochure long after its days and months are date.

The calendar presents the drawings of city artist Edward Goodall (10 of them were specially commissioned) and features the University of Victoria from its earliest days as well as other historic buildings.

There is a page for each month in 1967. The first three: show sketches of the Legis-lative Buildings, Government House and Craigflower School as well as small pictures of Hon: J. D. Pemberton, F. B. Pemberton, Major H. C. Holmes and Philip D. P. Short paragraphs on each of these pages tell of the work of

J. D. Pemberton as surveyor and engineer for the Hudson's Bay Company and as a legislator and surveyorgeneral for the Crown Colony of British Columbia, 36 years before the real estate office of "Pemberton and Son" was established in 1887.

They pinpoint briefly the work of F. B. Pemberton, not only as a member of the new firm but also as a surveyor and civil engineer, a breeder of prize-winning Clydesdale horses, the owner of Finnerty Holly Farm and as an outstanding gardener.

And they bring us up-to-date with Major Holmes' arrival in the firm in 1921, his rise to president in 1938 and his retirement from that office in 1965 when his son Philip D. Pemberton Holmes became president.

devoted to the birth, life and growth of Victoria College from its first home in the principal's office of the old Victoria High School (where Central Junior High now stands) to the fine new Gordon Head Campus where all university work will be concentrated in the new year.

Young whose name was given to the main building of the old Provincial Normal School on Lansdowne Road, when another move was made, and his wife Rose, who taught the original college class in 1903.

Also pictured are Dr. J. M. Ewing, head of the Lansdowne College and whose name is perpetuated in the first new building on that campus, Dr. W. H. Hickman, Dr. J. B. Clearibue, T. S. McPherson whose generosity made possible the fine library building on Gordon Head campus, Richard B, Wilson the new chancellor of the university. and Dr. Malcolm G. Taylor, its president.

Reverse pages show ex-cerpts from early newspapers. They start with editorials on "confederation of the colonies" published in Feb. 28, colonies" published in Feb. 28, 1867, and proceed through advertisements for miners' clothing in 1897, real estate offers in 1907 to a social page story on the marriage of Major Holmes and Miss Philipa Despard Pemberton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. Interspersed are other items that will bring back memories to many Victorians.

On Wednesday evening when I told you the story of a black sequin dress I named its first owner as Mrs. R. P. Rithet and in so doing took that dress back to the wrong generation. It was Mrs. John A. Rithet who lived in "Gis-burn" at the corner of Moss Street and Rockland Avenue and who first owned the lovely gown. Mrs. R. P. Rithet was the grandmother of the family. She lived at "Hollybank" on Humbolt Street, where cottage homes for the blind are now situated.

Has Succession Battle Started Among Socreds?

By JOHN MIKA

Times Legislative Reporter For anyone interested in politics, this week is a B.C. politics, this week is a huge rough diamond needing considerable study before it can be determined how to dissect it to expose all pos-sibie facets.

But there's no doubt that some of this week's events will

light ahead on the course that politics will take in near

Unless I've been dazzled into blindness by my own insights, the 111 uminating

Mika events were the cabinet changes on Monday, the Van-couver civic election on Wednesday and the surprising disclosure that some cabinet ministers backed Mayor-elect Tom Campbell against the premier's choice, Mayor William Rathie.

There was considerable dismay among the opposition, some neutral groups and even some neutral groups and even some Socreds that Wesley Black was picked for the health ministry because he does not have a reputation of being a good administrator or innovator

But others, notably the doctors, were happy because they much prefer Mr. Black to retired Eric Martin (and that's why the premier, anxious to have doctors' co-operation, put the B.C. Medical Plan under his administra-tion as provincial secretary in the first place.)

I liked Mr. Martin and consider him one of the most human politicians I've met and that quality is rare in this breed. It's true, as his critics point out, that he blundered at times, lost his temper played rough — so what else is new?

But even his worst moments had the style of an ordinary mortal like you or me. They did not grow out of an overweening ego or holier-than-thou attitude. He had an abiding interest and love for politics becuse people was its stuff, and, with but few exceptions, he was merry He also was (and tremendously loval to Premier Bennett and that is why he never became the health minister I believe he might have been. He believed in medicare, and fought for it, as ardently as any socialist and the little we have might never have come but for him.

properly, have been directed at the man who decided how much he could spend on hospitals and withheld from him the chance to start a full scale medicare program.

Mr. Black on the other hand will keep his head down to duck the barrage — some even nickname him "The Ostrich" — but he soon will have a convenient shield when the regulations for a federal medicare program begin pourng out of Ottawa. With that to blame for everything that goes wrong in tuture, Mr. Bennett is safe on the health front no matter who holds the portfolio.

But he is not so safe with
the three women ministers without portfolio. He stroked them with heavy praise— after appointing all three rather than face the conse-quences of choosing among them — then hopefully sug-gested that these nice little kittens run along home and play minister in their own

What a laugh! Women, politicians can turn into tigresses when the infighting starts.

Mr. Bennett is going to get badly scratched while these three fight it out for supremacy — and even his own party will laugh at his deserved discomfiture.

(The first battle will be to get separate offices and sec-retaries. Compounding original blunder, the premier announced the three ministers while Mrs. Dailly the lone woman MLA in opposition yet, is provided with an office to herself!)

All last year I laughed a the recurring suggestions that the premier was losing his grip but ever since he put himself into this quicksand (by suggesting to each woman candidate that she would be the one woman minister he promised electorate) I've begun to wonder - and watch with nightmarish fascination as he squirms in deeper and deeper.

It's enough to make even a political critic tremble. Dan Campbell's move up to the "big gun" status of a two-portfolio man is significant, I think, because it confirms that he's a real comer.

Advancement inside, as well as outside, the cabinet comes only in recognition of political power. To be the youngest member of an aging government and yet to be entrusted with growing power is enough to make any man aspire to

The Vancouver election con firmed, on the other hand, that the Socred power base more particularly Mr. Bennett's — in the big city is a

The voters not only slapped down the man the premier endorsed for mayor (and believe me, that step into the arena wasn't taken lightly so it's rejection shouldn't be either) but they also approved far-left winger Harry Rankin who made alderman in a big way after five successive trouncings.

Then, to rub it in, they gave about 6,500 votes (more than 7 per cent of those cast) to a 21year-old girl from Eastern Canada who spent only $250 on a campaign that identified her not only as a Marxist but a Trotskyite too! I can't ieve that all those voters did it just for kicks.

This apparent urbanite sympathy for leftist underdogs (observed in other parts of Canada this year) should raise some NDP-sized goose-bumps on the Socred backroom brigade that will have to plan the next provincial election.

But, perhaps most significant of all, was Leslie Peterson's calm and deliberate disclosure that — heresy of heresies — not all the cabinet hewed to Mr. Bennett's line on a purely political matter.

Could that have been the calm before the storm — of the succession battle for Mr. Bennett's throne? Or is it that Yet few outside of a small circle knew his true feelings because his loyalty to his of The Christmas Carol and a Vancouver's wishes now are more Bennett's well-worn coattails?

uppose we carried more important news yesterday than the Hollywoodtelined announcement Walt Disney's death. But to me, as to very many fathers, mothers, boys and girls in this city, the headline brought a feeling of personal loss.

This, I suppose, is because we tended to think of Walt Disney in personal terms. He was father to Mickey Mouse and Donald Duck, and a sort of kind, yarn-alimning imperishable granding imperishable granddad to the rest of us. You might perhaps find tome child in the land, or

I will not call Walt an institution. That's a harsh, cold word for the man with the debonair mustache and

Walt Disney was, and himself became, one of the world's happier traditions. The Iron Curtain was no barrier to him. I have been told that his enchantments penetrated even into Red China. Here at home, mothers who once wept for Bambi orphaned and laughed at Flower the skunk have shared with their own youngsters.

I never met Walt Disney, and since meetings with long-admired artists usually disappoint, am just as glad.

An American friend who briefly occupied a stall in his

Remember the beauty and menace of Walt's desert, and that strangest of combats between hawk and rattle-snake? Cameramen waited weeks and months for such episodes as those.)

But this was a gentle realist. I don't recall that in lethal encounters, Walt required that children should look on death. A bush interposed, or the camera shifted. He was, first and always, a magician who performed for children. Grown-ups could come along if they wished; but though parents waited in lineups to see the best of the Disney shows, they were guests, not tenants, in his

I know the record looks oad, and I know council has never been known to overule the police chief. Mr. Lineham said.

But I would point out that none of them were serious. Even the careless driving charges were for relatively minor offences.

OTTAWA (CP) — The pride of the navy — the aircraft rier Bonaventure — was described as "a pile of junk" carrier Bonaventure - in the Commons Thursday.

Robert Prittie (NDP-Burnaby-Richmond) worked in the jibe in a question to Revenue Minister Benson. Mr. Benson had just said Canada couldn't afford a 40-per-cent pay increase for air traffic controllers.

Can the Canadian people afford to pay out $11,000,000 on that pile of junk the Bonaventure?"

The question went unanswered. The Bonnie is currently undergoing an extensive overhaul and the defence department has had to increase its estimate of how much the work will cost. The figure now runs into millions of dollars.
